determination. Young Sameness. In relation to this matter the Altim Course of the 9th says calling the convict Hall inclease of Lindsoy c. The estrance to the cell is very narrow, the door of plate Iron, with a small grating at the top for vanishition. The door opens inwards and is very strongly fastened. It is impossible to get at the secondard without using great force, which we learned would be about during the night. During the day great fears were enterstanted that he would kill the guard, and for case of that, active operations were not pushed forward. The best loformed think there is now very little danger of his putting his threat into greaterion, as he must know that death would instantly be his lot.

Hall, the convict, is represented to be a most desperate secondres. In view of his character, and his threats, our effinence were yesterday much shermed for the safety of Crabb, who is well known and highly appreciated, and who has a family resoling in the city.

Yesterday everthing was done which could be done consistently with Crabb's safety. No shance would the convict give for any injury o himself, as he either studiously kept the guard between him and the grating, or haid

Twice or thrice did he repel the mob and stood against the dear of Reache cell until he was literally dranged need by the mob and held, but getting some went immediately back to his sharen. The look of the cell was strand ught or ten heavy bliows with a hammat, but did not yield. The mob still loudly cried to hang him, that nothing but his blood would saint. They were headed by a brother of the murdered man. The origin of the excitement was a report having him circulated that the full was not security guarded, and that the sail was not security guarded at night, dee, which we know correless to be an erromaous idea, for there has been a guard over him night and day ever since he has been confined.

After equabbling for some time and numerous appears inving been made to them urging them to let the law take its own course, and promises on the part of the Sheriff that he should be socurely guarded by men of their own choice, their earlies the strain is over course, and promises on the part of the Sheriff that he sheriff the security guarded by men of their own choice, their earlies and them of their better sense, and shoult o'clock the Sheriff pursuasted them to adjourn to his office, and what a few mountain before all was noise and clause was now as silent as the churchyard. Too much praise cannot be bestowed upon our most worthy and efficient Sheriff for the manner in which he did his duty.

That Beach should null will suffer the extreme penalty of the law has always been our bellef, for the surder of Sastellife was one of the mean and all his fellow printeners were seen recorded, but we say in favor of allowing the law to take its course.

Haisted gives the following narrative of his conversion:

A Christian who had been laboring with him said, "Now, Mr. Gardner, don't you feel as if you ought to change your course of filth? Said he, "I do," "Than," he asked, "why don't you do so of." "West," said Gardner, "I can't begin now." "Why not now?" "I have some matters in New York for settle up first." "Ah," said the guitteman, "him you had better nettle with your Maker first." "Well," said Gardner, "I am going to the city to morrow morroing, and when I return I will seek salvation." Well, in the morring he had his earpet hay ready to start, but, said he, o'! guess I will wait till to morrow morroing, and when I return I will seek salvation." Well, in the morrow morrow for a week. The spirit of God had kept him there. On Friday night he went to the meeting, and while he was there, the minister said to him, "Hadn't you better make up your mind to come forward and seek salvation?" "Well," said he "if I fait like that man I would?"—referring to a man who showed his centre to be saved, but was not yet converted. "Ah," said hother Gilbert, "your case is more critical than his." "Do you think to?" said he, "Yes, you know your duty, and will not do it." Gardner went benne that slight. "I don't like the remark the minnister made," said he, "My a, you know your duty, and will not do it." Gardner went benne that slight. "I don't like the remark the minnister made," said he, "and I went sixy if he tilning I'm in that condition." He wile and he didn't sleep tim! sight will he in another friend, "I am not satisfied with the diffe I have fed. ers were bent upon reducing the place to subset but little by little, as I gained by a change of position some ides of the scene as a whole, the destruction was not without a plan. There was a great blane at the north-west angle of the city. The gata there is curmounted by a Chinese guard house, with the amale grotesque apward pointed root. Shells and rockets were poursed in volleys upon this structure, and it soon became a sheet of fame, through which the roof, the rafters, and the waits stood out in dark cutiline. By constant showers of rockets the fame was led up and down the city wall, and in an incredible short time the long, this line of fire abot high into the beavens, and then unbeined into a smouldering smoke.

While this was still raging those vengerill rockets described a new parabola. They came hurtling through the mosalight along the line of the eastern wall. They songit out the three spots which have been marked as the objects of the triple assualt of the English and French troops to morrow. As those desadful 14 pound rockets flow, fames area. They seemed to lead the Tire about as a tame element precisely at they willed; and, straing to say, it never seemed to spread inwards or to stray from the line of the city walls. I expect that when, as some more convenient season, I come to see the Interior, I shall find that all the configurations we have been wanhing to inght with an awe-stricken pity have destroyed only that line of old houses which leant against the inner aids of the wall and afforded cover to those jingalls whence all our great losses in affairs with the Ohlinese have arisen. I may be wrong, for I piedge myself to nothing that I write in the confusion of showering rockets and erashing roofs—if I am wrong i one copyed my impressions hereafter.
